Maritime Labour Academy - Track 6

Workshop on the ILO Maritime Labour Convention,
2006 for Recruitment and Placement Services

International Training Centre

www.itcilo.org

Background

In 2001, in response to concerns about significant changes and increased globalization of the maritime sector, the international shipowners' and seafarers' organizations, meeting in the International Labour Organization's (ILO) Joint Maritime Commission requested the ILO to adopt a major new legal instrument to more effectively address these issues in present conditions. The recommendations were subsequently endorsed by governments and led - after five years of intensive tripartite discussions - to the adoption of the Maritime Labour Convention, 2006 ("MLC, 2006").

The MLC, 2006 was adopted by an almost unprecedented unanimous vote in favour. The Convention came into force on 20 August 2013 and there has been strong momentum for widespread ratification. The MLC, 2006 now covers more than 80 per cent of the world gross tonnage. Many countries have begun or are continuing to take steps for the effective implementation of the Convention.

The Convention aims to ensure decent working and living conditions for seafarers and to protect shipowners providing decent work for their seafarers from unfair competition from substandard ships.

Access to an efficient and well-regulated seafarer recruitment and placement system is essential to achieve these objectives. The Convention includes a dedicated Regulation governing the organization and licensing of recruitment and placement services by labour supplying countries and countries where such services operate.

The MLC, 2006 also contains an important new compliance and enforcement component based on a flag State ship inspection and certification system and port State control. The use of private recruitment and placement services in particular, is subject to inspection and certification by the flag State and to control in foreign ports.

Shipowners must not only monitor and document compliance with the Convention provisions governing the use of private placement and recruitment services, but remain ultimately responsible for the working and living conditions even though they may delegate the task of recruitment to such external agencies.

Objectives and Content

The workshop aims to strengthen the capacity of regulatory authorities, recruitment and placement services, shipowners, ship operators and seafarers' representatives to ensure implementation of the Convention's provisions governing the recruitment and placement of seafarers on board ships.

After participating in the Workshop, participants should be able to:

- understand the principles of fair recruitment;
- understand the roles and responsibilities regarding placement and recruitment of seafarers;
- effectively implement the provisions of the Convention governing the operation of placement and recruitment services.

Target group
